PARTS TERMS AND CONDITIONS

The Australian Competition and Consumer Commission (the ACCC) including the Australian Consumer Law (the ACL) may act as an enforcement body under the ACL. The ACCC has broad enforcement powers in relation to the ACL. If the ACCC determines that the ACL has been contravened, they may impose a financial penalty in respect of the alleged contravention. The ACCC may also consider an application to the Federal Court for a declaration that an alleged contravention of the ACL has occurred, and a court order may be made requiring the person who is alleged to have contravened the ACL to carry out a specified course of conduct. The ACCC also has the ability to seek enforcement orders from the Federal Court, the State courts or the Federal Magistrates Court. In Australia, the ACCC uses these powers to investigate and enforce the ACL.
